

Hints for journal publications

Sally Logsdon, Editor-in-Chief, Soil Science Society of America
National Laboratory for Agriculture and the Environment, USDA-ARS

Hints for journal publications

1. Start writing introduction and methods sections even before you conduct the experiments.

Sally Logsdon, Editor-in-Chief, Soil Science Society of America
National Laboratory for Agriculture and the Environment, USDA-ARS

Hints for journal publications

2. Have a clear hypothesis or objective in mind, and make sure experiments are designed appropriately.

Sally Logsdon, Editor-in-Chief, Soil Science Society of America
National Laboratory for Agriculture and the Environment, USDA-ARS

Hints for journal publications

3. Clearly designate the objective in both the main text and the abstract.

Sally Logsdon, Editor-in-Chief, Soil Science Society of America
National Laboratory for Agriculture and the Environment, USDA-ARS

Hints for journal publications

4. Select how to summarize data in text, graphs, and tables. (Do not show every data point, but trends, means, examples.)

Sally Logsdon, Editor-in-Chief, Soil Science Society of America
National Laboratory for Agriculture and the Environment, USDA-ARS

Hints for journal publications

5. Match manuscript content to journal emphasis
(i.e. pick the right journal).

Sally Logsdon, Editor-in-Chief, Soil Science Society of America
National Laboratory for Agriculture and the Environment, USDA-ARS

Hints for journal publications

6. Attend to details of format, presentation, and graphs appropriate for the journal.

Sally Logsdon, Editor-in-Chief, Soil Science Society of America
National Laboratory for Agriculture and the Environment, USDA-ARS

Hints for journal publications

7. Let others in your field of study give advice on the manuscript before you submit to a journal.

Sally Logsdon, Editor-in-Chief, Soil Science Society of America
National Laboratory for Agriculture and the Environment, USDA-ARS